PREFACE

The Book of Chicagoans was first published in 1905. A second edition was issued in 1911. A third edition has been called for, and the present volume is presented as the best possible response to that demand.

This edition contains many names not listed in the earlier issues—names hitherto unavoidably overlooked, as well as a large number of names which have come into prominence since the previous edition was printed. The work of revision has been painstaking and thorough. Not only have many new names been added, but each of the original sketches has been rewritten in order that the best possible arrangement of the data for easy reference purposes might be secured; and value has been added by the inclusion of the names of many leading women. The names of women were not included in the previous volumes.

A casual examination of these pages will disclose not only the presence of many new names, but also the absence of a considerable number of sketches which appeared in the earlier issues. The omissions are accounted for by reason of deaths (The Book of Chicagoans being confined to the living only), removals from the city, impossibility to find present addresses, and a few because they are no longer regarded of sufficient importance.

It is known that 841 persons whose names appeared in the previous edition have died and that 408 have removed from the city; consequently their sketches have been dropped, and 729 have been omitted for other reasons. The names, however, have been included in the present edition and reference has been made to the volume in which the sketches may be found.

This feature will be of particular value to those who may wish to secure reliable biographical information about many men who were prominent in the business or social life of Chicago in the opening years is here given in undiluted form and every item is presented in a plain, unvarnished, concise, condensed manner, which may be at once understood.

In number and representative selection of subjects, accuracy of detail and authoritative usefulness as a work of reference, it is confidently claimed that The Book of Chicagoans is the most complete compilation of Chicago biography ever printed. Not only is this true, but by far the larger part of the information it contains is not procurable, in print, from any other source.

With a view to further revisions, as time and necessity shall make them advisable, suggestions for further improvements, changes in biographical data, notices of deaths and announcements of changes of address as they occur, are again invited.

Chicago, October 1, 1917.
